JCK's 150th: Dallas Prince on How JCK Helped Her Break into the Industry

August 15, 2019 by JCK MAGAZINE

JCK magazine is celebrating its 150th anniversary this year! To commemorate that milestone, we're talking to 150 veteran jewelry professionals in 2019 for a feature series meant to distill the voices of some of the industry's most enduring and successful professionals.

We can't print every interview in its entirety in the magazine—so we've been posting full interviews here on JCKonline.com every Thursday.

This week we hear from Dallas Prince, owner of Dallas Prince Designs.

JCK: How long have you been in the jewelry industry, and how has it changed since you joined?

Dallas Prince: My introduction into the the jewelry industry was through a very unique “side door” that opened into a dream come true. My career at that time was in television and film—in front of the camera as a news anchor and behind the camera as an art director.

As the door was closing on a long-running show, I was offered an opportunity to redesign the on-air graphics and sets for a small television shopping network, which seemed like a short-term position, but I loved the atmosphere.
